Item 8.01 Other Events

As previously disclosed, Zions Bancorporation's interest rate risk management posture in recent quarters has been to increase the asset sensitive position of its balance sheet. By increasing the asset sensitivity of its balance sheet, if market interest rates increase, it is expected that the Company's net interest income would increase at a faster rate.

In recent days the Company has taken additional steps to increase the asset sensitivity of its balance sheet. Specifically, the Company has entered into federal funds futures contracts that effectively shorten the duration of certain securities in the investment portfolios of a number of its subsidiary banks. Zions expects that it may continue to utilize these contracts as one of its tools to manage the Company's interest rate risk.

The utilization of these contracts requires that the tax basis of the securities in the investment portfolios be adjusted downward, for tax purposes only, to fair value. These adjustments result in a pre-tax loss for tax purposes of approximately $423 million on the securities affected. These adjustments will be recognized on the Company's consolidated tax return for 2009.

These transactions will have no material impact on consolidated GAAP net income; however, these transactions impact the balance sheet by reducing GAAP net federal deferred tax assets by approximately $148 million.

The Company estimates that, as a result of tax losses in 2009, including the adjustments on the securities in the investment portfolio discussed above, it will receive a cash refund of a substantial majority of the total $340 million of federal income taxes paid in 2007.
