Commercial & Residential Solutions	0 to +5	+5	+5 to +10

December 2012 Orders Comments:

Trailing three-month order trends remained slow in total but reflected notable improvement in certain end markets. Growth accelerated in Climate Technologies and Commercial & Residential Solutions, and solid end markets in Process Management supported continued growth despite difficult comparisons. Mixed trends in Network Power reflected improving demand in some markets and deterioration in others. Industrial Automation orders declined at rates consistent with the prior month. Currency translation had a negligible impact.

Process Management orders grew modestly, with mixed trends among geographies. Oil and gas investment remained robust in Asia and Latin America. Difficult comparisons resulted in softer orders in North America, and weakness in Europe continued. Currency translation added 2 percentage points.

Weak global capital goods end markets continued to place downward pressure on Industrial Automation orders. The power generating alternators and industrial motors business was particularly weak, partially offset by improving trends in the electrical drives business.

Edgar Filing: EMERSON ELECTRIC CO - Form 8-K

Network Power order trends remained unchanged, with mixed trends among businesses and end markets. Excluding currency, the network power systems business grew for the first time in 6 months, benefiting from more favorable telecommunications end markets. This sequential improvement was offset by weaker market conditions for embedded computing and power, reflecting demand volatility from mobile device customers.

Climate Technologies order trends improved, led by robust growth in Asia, as China, India, and Southeast Asia all exhibited significant gains. U.S air conditioning end markets also reflected strong growth, benefiting from favorable prior year comparisons, and market conditions improved in Europe as well. Refrigeration end markets continued to contract.

Order trends remained solid in Commercial & Residential Solutions, as strong momentum in U.S. residential end markets drove the highest pace of growth in 9 months. Growth was led by the storage and food waste disposers businesses.
