NOTES TO EDITORS

About Ropinirole

Ropinirole is a non-ergot dopamine agonist currently marketed as REQUIP® (ropinirole HCl) Tablet. It has an indication in the U.S. for the treatment of the signs and symptoms of idiopathic Parkinson's disease, taken three times a day. REQUIP LP uses SkyePharma's proprietary Geomatrix™ technology and has been designed to have a simpler and faster titration schedule.

Our partner GSK conducted two pivotal studies to support of the registration of ropinirole prolonged release tablets. The first study was a ropinirole monotherapy study in early PD, and the other was an adjunct study with levodopa. Both studies confirmed the efficacy of ropinirole prolonged release tablets, in terms of symptomatic control and their daily activities.

About Parkinson's Disease

Parkinson's disease is a chronic, progressive and debilitating neurological condition that affects movement and balance. Researchers have determined that Parkinson's disease involves pathways in the brain that are not functioning properly. Patients with Parkinson's disease experience a reduction in dopamine, which is needed to communicate messages about movement, resulting in the symptoms of Parkinson's disease. The symptoms include (slower-than-normal voluntary movements), rigidity (stiffness), tremor (involuntary shaking) and loss of balance.

In Europe, an estimated 800,000 people live with PD, with about 75,000 new cases diagnosed every year. SkyePharma is a key to helping them maintain a good quality of life and minimising long-term side effects. A significant barrier to positive patient outcomes in PD.
