GM Announces Pricing of Convertible Securities Offering

Offering Size Increased to $1.3 Billion Due to Strong Market Demand

New York General Motors [NYSE: GM] today announced pricing on its convertible securities offering. The size of the offering was increased to $1.3 billion from $1.1 billion due to a favorable response from the market. In connection with the offering, GM also announced that it has granted the underwriters an over-allotment option to purchase up to $195 million aggregate principal amount of additional notes.

Interest on the notes will be paid semiannually on June 1 and Dec. 1 of each year at a rate of 1.50 percent per year. Upon the occurrence of certain events, the notes will be convertible by holders based on an initial conversion rate of approximately 0.68 shares of common stock per $25 principal amount of notes, which is equivalent to an initial conversion price of approximately $36.57 per share. This initial conversion price represents a premium of approximately 20 percent relative to the last reported sale price on May 24, 2007 of GM's common stock of $30.47.

In connection with this offering, GM entered into capped call transactions with affiliates of the underwriters of the offering. The capped call transactions are expected to reduce the potential dilution upon conversion of the notes and effectively increase the conversion premium to 50 percent higher than today's last reported sale price of GM's common stock. This is equivalent to an effective conversion price of $45.71 per share.

The net proceeds to GM from this offering will be approximately $1.2 billion including the cost of the capped call transaction but excluding any proceeds attributable to the underwriters' possible exercise of their over-allotment option.
