Chairman and Chief Executive Officer

Dear colleagues:

Right now, the United States is going through a change that occurs on schedule every four years. We're in the middle of a spirited campaign that will culminate with the election of a new president in November. This election could make history by bringing America its first woman or African-American president. But whichever of the three candidates wins, there will be a change in leadership for the U.S., and some changes will undoubtedly take place in the country. But the election won't change the fundamental core of American democracy. We'll be the same nation with new leadership.

That kind of continuity is never far from the surface when major change occurs within strong, healthy nations or strong, healthy companies. In that sense, the changes under way within Trane have some similarities to the changes promised by the U.S. presidential election campaign. In both cases, we know what's going to change. We just don't know the details. Experience and logic tell us that a new U.S. president won't fundamentally change our lives. For Trane, change is not as regular as the U.S. election cycle. But new ownership won't change the fundamentals of our business.

As you've seen in our recent organization announcements, we'll have some leadership changes when Trane becomes part of Ingersoll Rand. But there will be important leadership continuity as well. The senior leaders from Trane who are becoming part of Ingersoll Rand are seasoned professionals, just like the senior leaders from Ingersoll Rand they'll be joining. We've seen changes in leadership before and managed them effectively. That's how good companies handle change, and that's how we'll handle our changes.

As I've said before, the vast majority of Trane people will be doing the same jobs they are doing now after our acquisition by Ingersoll Rand is finalized. Trane will continue to work to expand its industry leadership as part of a strong, large company.

Acquisition update

We're working on obtaining U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission (SEC) approval of registration documents, which is the last step required before we schedule a shareowner vote on the planned acquisition. We don't yet know the date of the shareowner vote or the exact acquisition completion date. But, I can tell you that the shareowner vote will occur about one month after completion of the SEC review process, and the completion of the acquisition will occur immediately after shareowner approval. When we know the exact date, we'll let you know. Over the coming weeks, you'll be learning more about our Day 1 plans, and we'll continue to provide answers to your questions related to the Ingersoll Rand transition.

Business update

As we approach completion of the acquisition, we've stayed focused on serving our customers and delivering our business goals. The first-quarter results we announced Tuesday demonstrated the ability of Trane people to take care of business, undistracted by the pending change in ownership.

We all worked hard to deliver a good first quarter. Commercial sales remained strong, buoyed by growth in services and our global equipment sales. Residential sales felt the housing downturn in the U.S., but outpaced the difficult market. Overall, we increased sales by 6.5 percent compared with first quarter 2007. Unfortunately, the slowdown in economic growth hasn't slowed down the rise in commodities prices, especially the metals and energy so important to our manufacturing processes. But our productivity and ability to obtain some higher pricing helped offset the commodity cost increases. It all added up to earnings that exceeded expectations.

For the remainder of the year, we expect slower growth in U.S. commercial equipment sales and continued difficult conditions in the residential market. On a positive note, we expect solid commercial equipment growth outside the U.S. and strong growth in global services. As a result of these factors, we lowered our sales growth projections for 2008, from 5-6 percent to 4-5 percent. Even with these lower sales expectations, we're confident about our full-year earnings projections and reaffirmed the estimates provided in January. You can read all the details in Tuesday's earnings news release.

Stepping back for a moment, we know that cyclical economic downturns are nothing new to us or anyone else. We've increased sales and earnings through difficult economies in the past, and we're prepared to do it again. We're always careful about spending and we're going to be even more careful during the rest of the year.

Yet, we don't intend to run for cover. We'll continue to invest in the future of the business with new products and technology. We'll create opportunities for growth by improving our offer to customers. That's part of the creative approach to change that you make possible. It's an approach that's worked well through all kinds of change for Trane, and it will work just as well when Trane is part of Ingersoll Rand.

Thanks,
