Subject: Organizational Announcement from Ed Muller: GenOn Leadership Team

On April 11, I shared with you the news of our company's plan to merge with RRI Energy to form GenOn Energy. GenOn will be one of the largest merchant generation companies in the United States with over 24,700 MWs of capacity. The combined company will have a strong balance sheet, enhanced financial flexibility and ample liquidity. The merger also creates significant near-term value for our stockholders through cost savings to be achieved through reductions in corporate overhead, and general and administrative expenses.

Concurrent with the merger, we announced the members of the executive leadership team for GenOn. I also shared with you our plan that within 60 days you would know how this transaction would affect your role going forward.

This work has been taken up by the RRI/Mirant integration team, co-led by Bill Holden and Mark Jacobs, the CEO of RRI. The team is focused on the key decisions that will allow us to meet our 60-day commitment, achieve our targeted cost-savings and position GenOn to operate seamlessly from day one after closing.

Please join me in congratulating the new GenOn leadership team.

Consistent with our 60-day commitment, these individuals will now be responsible for making subsequent personnel decisions within their respective groups.

I want to emphasize that these changes will not be effective until the merger closes later this year. Until that time, all personnel will continue in their current roles and reporting relationships.

I also want to acknowledge that some very tough decisions were made in forming the team. There are excellent people in both the RRI and Mirant organizations who have made substantial contributions to the success of each company. The merged company must be staffed appropriately and, as a result, many talented individuals will not have a continuing role at GenOn. Please join me in acknowledging them for their many contributions and supporting them through the close of the transaction and in their future endeavors.
