An update on Dell's agreement to go private

To: Global Dell Team

A month ago we announced a definitive agreement under which Michael and global technology investment firm Silver Lake, will acquire Dell and take it private.

As expected, this proposed transaction has generated significant interest and commentary from media, investors and other stakeholders. There will continue to be speculation, conjecture and uncertainty as the process moves forward. We want to assure you that this is all part of the process being led by our Board of Directors, and we ask that you keep these developments in proper perspective and keep in mind the following.

Today, we remain a publicly-traded company and will continue to operate as such on behalf of our stockholders. It is important to remain focused on serving our customers, providing them a superior experience and the products and solutions to help them do and achieve more.

We understand you may have many questions and recognize this potential transaction could create uncertainty, especially about how it might impact you personally. We have provided a brief FAQ below to address some of your most common questions. We will continue to communicate with you in an open, honest and transparent manner.

We are committed to being a best-in-class solutions provider, and as a private company will be better able to shape our long-term vision for the future of technology and the ways it can help all our customers achieve their goals.

This is an exciting new chapter in Dell's transformation. We are making great progress, and we have much more opportunity in front of us.

Note: Materials about this proposed transaction are archived internally on this SharePoint site. An updated English version of the sales talking points were posted there today.

Team member FAQs

- 1. There has been a lot of news coverage of the potential transaction. What are the next steps in the process?

The Special Committee is currently managing a 45-day go-shop period, during which the Special Committee with the assistance of its independent financial and legal advisors will actively solicit, receive, evaluate and potentially enter into negotiations with parties that offer alternative proposals. The 45-day go-shop period concludes on March 22 and the Special Committee will be permitted to continue discussions and enter into or recommend a transaction with any person or group that submitted a qualifying proposal during the 45-day period.

In addition to the requirement that the holders of a majority of the Company's outstanding shares vote in favor of the transaction, which will be sought at a special stockholder meeting, the transaction must be approved by the holders of a majority of the Company's outstanding shares, excluding shares held by Michael and certain members of Dell's management and Board of Directors.

2. When will the transaction be completed?

Following the go-shop process, the transaction is expected to close before the end of the second quarter of Dell's FY14, subject to approval by a majority of the outstanding Dell shares, excluding shares owned by Michael or certain members of Dell's management and Board of Directors, as well as the satisfaction of customary closing conditions.

3. Will there be organizational changes?

Until the transaction closes, we remain a publicly-traded company and will continue to report quarterly financial results. Our focus remains on serving our customers, providing them a superior experience and the products and solutions to help them do and achieve more.

Our FY14 business plan remains unchanged and we must continue to execute against it. We are continuing to implement our productivity and efficiency program targeting $2 billion in opportunity across the company.

4. What does it mean to cease being a public company and operate as a private company?

Upon closing of this transaction, which is subject to shareholder approvals and other customary closing conditions, Dell will be owned by Michael and Silver Lake.

Our brand, purpose and values remain unchanged. You still work for the same company with the same manager in the same building and serve the same customers.

As a private company, our stock will no longer be traded on the NASDAQ stock exchange, ownership will no longer be available to public investors and we will no longer be subject to NASDAQ rules and regulations and most public company reporting requirements.

5. Can I sell my shares of Dell now? Can I exercise options and sell them now?

Team members are free to trade in Dell stock and exercise options except during companywide blackout periods. Team members who are subject to trading restrictions due to their role in the company or involvement in special projects must obtain prior approval from Robert Lindsey, our SEC counsel.
