General guidelines

Harris and Exelis are independent companies until closing and should not take any action that reduces that independence or any competition between them.

Consult legal team when in doubt about whether conduct is appropriate

Legal Do's and Don'ts

Do

DO continue to operate as a separate and independent business.

DO continue to compete in any and all business activities in which we have been competitors before the merger was announced.

DO continue to deal with each other as a supplier, potential customer or teammate, but only in the ordinary course of business as you would before the merger was announced and like you do other independent companies.

Don't

DON'T seek to influence or control the other company's business behavior prior to closing and be sensitive to creating that appearance the prohibition applies to all areas of the business and is not limited to competitively sensitive areas.

DON'T share competitively sensitive business information.

DON'T contact employees from the other company outside the ordinary course of business unless such contacts are approved in advance by the Legal Department.
