Item 5.02 Departure of Directors or Certain Officers; Election of Directors; Appointment of Certain Officers; Compensatory Arrangements of Certain Officers.

MetLife, Inc.'s Board of Directors amended and restated the MetLife Performance-Based Compensation Recoupment Policy (the Policy), effective November 1, 2017. MetLife's stock-based long-term incentive awards, annual cash incentive compensation, and other performance-based compensation to MetLife, Inc. executive officers and other employees (collectively, Performance-Based Compensation) is subject to the Policy in effect from time to time.

Under the Policy, MetLife may seek to recoup Performance-Based Compensation:

from an employee who engaged in or contributed to fraudulent or other wrongful conduct, including by failure to appropriately supervise, that caused financial or reputational harm to MetLife, including a MetLife, Inc. accounting restatement required by material noncompliance with financial reporting requirements; and from a MetLife, Inc. executive officer, if the MetLife, Inc. Board of Directors or its Compensation Committee determines that the Performance-Based Compensation was based in whole or in part on materially inaccurate performance metrics, regardless of whether the executive officer was responsible for the inaccuracy. In such cases, MetLife may seek to recoup Performance-Based Compensation awarded to, credited, earned by, or paid to the executive officer within the current or past three fiscal years.

Under the Policy, MetLife's recoupment can include offset from amounts otherwise credited, payable, or due; forfeiture or cancellation of awards or amounts deferred; and/or recovery or repayment, as applicable and to the extent permissible under law. The Policy does not restrict MetLife from enforcing any other rights or remedies.

The foregoing description is not complete and is qualified by reference to the Policy, which is filed as Exhibit 10.1 hereto.
