Attn: Nilza Maria Silva de Oliveira

Company Oversight Manager 1

Dear Madam,

With regard to Official Letter 568/2016/CVM/SEP/GEA-1, of December 20, 2016, received on December 22, 2016, through which this Agency requests clarifications on the news report published on December 20, 2016, in the newspaper Folha de São Paulo, as transcribed below, we inform the following:

“Ação de delator no Congresso rendeu R$8.4 bi à Odebrecht” [Whistleblower in Congress yielded R$8.4 billion for Odebrecht]

By: JULIO WIZIACK and CAMILA MATTOSO

The Odebrecht Group obtained benefits of at least R$ 8.4 billion with the approval of two provisional presidential decrees between 2006 and 2015.

According to the plea agreement of a former executive of the construction company, the votes in favor of the presidential decrees involved the payment of at least R$16.9 million in bribes to congressmen and donations to electoral campaigns.

The survey by Folha was conducted based on information provided to the Federal Prosecution Office (MP) by Cláudio Melo Filho, former Corporate Affairs VP at Odebrecht.

In his plea agreement with Operation Car Wash, he confirmed having paid for nine provisional decrees that passed and were sanctioned into law and provided more details of how the scheme worked to approve four of them.

Our reporters were able to calculate the benefit obtained by the company from two of the measures, 255/2005 and 677/2015.

For the first, which became known as “Lei do Bem,” Odebrecht called for an exemption from PIS and Cofins tax on purchases of feedstock (naphtha) in order to reduce the operating costs of its petrochemical producer, Braskem.

At the time, naphtha accounted for 76% of its costs, according to the company’s financial statements.

According to the whistleblower, Senator Romero Jucá (PMDB-RR), currently the government leader in Congress, worked actively to secure the inclusion and approval of the amendments presented by Odebrecht in the final text to be sanctioned.

A previous measure had been filed and, in its place, MP 255 was submitted to Congress.

Also according to the former executive, Jucá used his power to approve it. At the time, Braskem CEO Carlos Fadigas projected that the company could capture gains of 3.65% from PIS and Cofins tax credits from naphtha purchases, after deducting the taxes paid on the sale of goods produced using the feedstock.

According to the calculations of our reporters, with the help of tax experts, the gain reached around R$408 million in 2006 alone (R$774 million restated by inflation in the period).

Between 2006 and 2015, the cumulative gains amounted to at least R$3.5 billion, or R$6.9 billion restated by inflation.

Another episode involving the company and Congress took place in 2012.

In his plea agreement, Melo Filho mentions the renewal of the petrochemical company's contracts with Chesf, the main power utility in the Northeast.

One of Braskem's main plants is located in the Northeast state of Alagoas.

At the time, several manufacturers pressured Congress to approve a measure to extend the period of Chesf's reduced electricity rates. The judge-rapporteur at the time was Renan Calheiros (PMDB-AL), currently president of the Senate.

"I tried to negotiate with him this issue of renewing the contracts with Chesf through the Legislative branch," said Melo Filho.

"The Senator addressed the topics with the intermediation of Senator Romero Jucá," he said.

According to the whistleblower, Jucá tried to pass the amendments proposed by Odebrecht regarding Chesf through another nine provisional decrees.

"After long dedication [by Jucá], finally an amendment proposed by him would enable generators to keep their direct supply contracts with large consumers in the Northeast," said Melo Filho.

President Dilma Rousseff vetoed the first measure and, nearly three years later, another provisional presidential decree, number 677, was approved, just like Odebrecht wanted.

With this, the company reversed the declines in the stock price of its petrochemical company and Braskem's market capitalization rose to R$1.5 billion restated by inflation, with the rally in its stock continuing.

Melo Filho said Odebrecht also donated R$320,000 to the campaign of the son of Renan Calheiros (Renan Filho, from PMDB) to Alagoas state governor for the "hard work" in defending the contractor's interests.

THE OTHER SIDE

Braskem said it signed a leniency agreement under which it undertook to pay R$3.1 billion – without answering whether the purchase of the provisional measures was included in the calculation. Odebrecht, which has been emphasizing its cooperating with the Courts, did not make any statement.
