The Company also announced that it has sold its oil wells and leasehold interest in its Cheyenne River Prospect located in the Powder River Basin of Wyoming. The Company received about $170,000 in net proceeds from this sale.

Reno, Nevada, which we expect will be approved in early fall. It is anticipated that the new test well will be drilled to 6,000 feet or to a depth sufficient to penetrate 500' into the Triassic formation, which the Company feels is the source for the oil shows encountered in the first well. This location appears to be validated by W. L. Gore Company's geochemical imaging survey carried out this past December. The Company has a 57% working interest in the new test well and 85,145 acres of federal oil and gas leases held in the prospect area. Management feels the Company has developed a world class prospect with large reserve potential and is currently exploring various options to finance its portion of the cost to drill the second test well. The Company anticipates the well will be spudded in late September.
