###

The following text was sent to the CNBC and CNNfn cable television financial news networks on June 26, 2001:

"Computer Associates introduced a series of initiatives over the last year that we believe are generating sustainable competitive advantage. Our stock is up substantially since the beginning of the year while many other technology companies are down.

"Mr. Wyly's campaign is one of innuendo, misinformation and self-serving assertions to mask the fact that he is offering little of substance other than asking shareholders to hand over their company to him and trust him that he can do a better job.

"In the weeks ahead, we will be reaching out to every investor and explaining why the few suggestions Mr. Wyly makes are reckless and would be detrimental to the company, its customers and employees."
