Dell Inc. is delaying the filing of the Form 10-Q for its fiscal third quarter ended November 3, 2006 (the Q3 Form 10-Q). As previously announced, the U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission (SEC) and the Company's Audit Committee are conducting investigations into certain accounting and financial reporting matters, including the possibility of misstatements in prior period financial reports, and the company previously received a related subpoena from the United States Attorney for the Southern District of New York (SDNY). Due to questions raised in connection with these ongoing investigations, the company is unable to file the Q3 Form 10-Q.

The investigations are examining certain accounting and financial reporting matters, including issues relating to reserves and other balance sheet items that may affect the company's previously reported financial results. The investigations are ongoing, and no determination has been made as to whether restatements of prior period financial statements will be required. The company is not currently able to predict the extent or significance of any such changes, and those changes could materially affect previously announced results.

Management is cooperating with the SEC, the Audit Committee and the SDNY, and the company is committed to resolving the issues raised in connection with the investigations, and regaining compliance with all SEC filing requirements (including the filing of the Q3 Form 10-Q) and all NASDAQ listing requirements, as soon as possible.

(2) Have all other periodic reports required under Section 13 or 15(d) of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 or Section 30 of the Investment Company Act of 1940 during the preceding 12 months or for such shorter period that the registrant was required to file such report(s) been filed? If answer is no, identify report(s). o Yes No

The company has not filed the Form 10-Q for its fiscal second quarter ended August 4, 2006.

(3) Is it anticipated that any significant change in results of operations from the corresponding period for the last fiscal year will be reflected by the earnings statements to be included in the subject report or portion thereof? Yes No

If so, attach an explanation of the anticipated change, both narratively and quantitatively, and, if appropriate, state the reasons why a reasonable estimate of the results cannot be made.

On November 21, 2006, Dell Inc. issued a press release reporting preliminary financial results for its fiscal third quarter ended November 3, 2006, and furnished the results to the SEC on a current report on Form 8-K. Those preliminary results showed revenue of $14.4 billion (compared to $13.9 billion for the corresponding period of last fiscal year), operating income of $824 million (compared to $754 million for the corresponding period of last fiscal year), net income of $677 (compared to $606 million for the corresponding period of the last fiscal year) and earnings per share of 30 cents (compared to 25 cents for the corresponding period of last fiscal year). Note that the results of operations for the corresponding period of last fiscal year include a charge of $442 million (pre-tax) related to the cost of servicing or replacing certain systems, workforce realignment, product rationalizations, excess facilities and a write-off of goodwill. For further detail regarding the charge see Dell's Quarterly Report on Form 10-Q for the fiscal quarter ended October 28, 2005.

The preliminary financial results for the fiscal third quarter ended November 3, 2006, as well as the previously announced financial results for the fiscal second quarter, are subject to change to reflect any necessary corrections or adjustments, or changes in accounting estimates, that are identified prior to the time the company's financial statements for those quarters are finalized. In addition, as described in Part III, the company may determine that restatements of prior period financial reports are necessary. Such restatements, if any, could impact the preliminary financial results for the fiscal third quarter, the published financial results for the corresponding period of last fiscal year and, therefore, the degree of change between the current and prior year periods described in this Part IV, Item (3).

There are many risk factors that may cause the actual results of the company's operations to differ from those that have been reported or are expected. These potential risks and uncertainties include, among other things, the outcome of the ongoing investigations into certain accounting and financial reporting matters (which could include a determination that restatement of prior period financial statements is required, a conclusion that there is a material weakness in the company's internal controls over financial reporting or a determination that disclosure controls and procedures are not effective); the company's inability to meet NASDAQ requirements for continued listing as a result of its delayed quarterly report filings; and litigation and governmental investigations or proceedings arising out of or related to such accounting and financial reporting matters, or any restatement of the company's financial statements. More information about these and other factors affecting the company's business and prospects is contained in the company's periodic filings with the Securities and Exchange Commission.
