Q&A for Aleris Leadership Team: Do not forward or distribute copies of this document. To be used only as talking points in conjunction with the merger press release dated August 8, 2006

1. What does today's announcement mean for the Company?

A: Put simply, Aleris's Board of Directors believes the merger agreement is fair and in the best interests of shareholders. Once this transaction is complete, Aleris will become a privately owned company.

2. What happens next?

A: In the coming weeks, Aleris will file a preliminary proxy statement with the SEC. This statement will contain information about the transaction and will be available to the public. Once any SEC review is completed, a definitive proxy statement will be filed with the SEC and mailed to shareholders. Following the mailing of the definitive proxy statement, shareholders will vote on the transaction. If the merger is approved, and all closing conditions are met, the transaction can be closed.

Under the merger agreement, Aleris may solicit superior proposals from strategic bidders who manufacture or fabricate metals during the next 30 days. In accordance with the agreement, the board of directors of Aleris with the assistance of its independent advisors, intends to actively solicit superior proposals during this period. Aleris advises that there can be no assurance that the solicitation of superior proposals will result in an alternative transaction. Aleris does not intend to disclose developments with respect to the solicitation process unless and until its board of directors has made a decision.

3. What is the voting requirement by shareholders to approve the transaction?

A: A majority of the shares outstanding must vote to adopt the merger agreement.

4. Why this, why now?

A: After careful analysis, the board has endorsed this transaction as being in the best interests of our shareholders.

5. Will jobs be eliminated?

A: The terms of the merger agreement do not call for the elimination of any positions.

6. When will the deal be finalized? How will it affect operations in the interim?

A: We anticipate the deal will be finalized in early 2007. The terms of the transaction do not require any operations changes.

7. Will the corporate headquarters remain in Beachwood, Ohio?
