Team Expedia

Today we announced that we have entered into an agreement to acquire HomeAway, Inc., including all of its brands (principally HomeAway globally, VRBO in the US, Stayz in Australia, Homelidays in France, and FeWo-direkt in Germany) for $3.9 billion in cash and stock. We have had our eyes on the vacation rental space for a long time, including testing and learning our way into our partnership with HomeAway over the last two years. Adding to our hotel and lodging supply is a hugely strategic growth driver for our company moving forward (and part of our BHAGs), and bringing HomeAway into the EI family is a big step in the right direction to compete in the fast growing ~$100 billion alternative accommodations space.

Given that the transaction has not yet closed and is subject to certain regulatory approvals and the tender of a majority of the shares of HomeAway, there isn't too much that I can share at this time. It's important to note that this is an announcement only, and until the transaction is closed (expected sometime in Q1 next year), the companies will operate as they have up to this point: separately and independently. As such, we have established an internal team, led by Corporate Development and Legal, which will manage the process through closing.

Please note that any interactions with HomeAway should be coordinated through this team and unless otherwise authorized under no circumstances should you contact any partners, customers, vendors, suppliers or employees of HomeAway with respect to the transaction. If any partner, member of the media, HomeAway employee or other third party contacts you during this period outside of authorized contact, please refrain from responding and notify ProjectHComms@expedia.com immediately. In terms of impact to our work on a day-to-day basis, it will be business as usual until the closing of the proposed transaction.

As you probably heard in our Town Hall, I'm really pleased with how our teams continue to execute. We have to be obsessed with improving and optimizing every aspect of our customer interaction – from higher conversion to improved repeat, from better pricing and broader supply to best in class service. We've proven our ability to execute not only with our core brands, but increasingly with new brands that we have welcomed into the family such as Travelocity, Wotif and, most recently, Orbitz. While we intend to run HomeAway relatively independently out of Austin, we do believe that we can help HomeAway accelerate their own transition from a listings-based business to a transactional platform for alternative accommodations.

Edgar Filing: HOMEAWAY INC - Form 425

In the meantime, we have a ton of work and challenges ahead of us. We continue to fight every single day for the right to serve our travelers and industry partners. The minute we stumble they'll turn to someone else (and there are plenty of others ready to serve them). Keep your edge and keep up the good work.
