FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

Pershing Square Comments on Target's Objection to Universal Ballot Proposal

New York Pershing Square Capital Management, L.P., and Professor Ronald J. Gilson, who has been nominated by Pershing Square to serve as an independent director of Target Corporation (NYSE: TGT), expressed disappointment with Target's response to Professor Gilson's letter seeking the use of a universal proxy card, naming both Target's and Pershing Square's nominees, for use in connection with Target's upcoming Annual Meeting of Shareholders.

Rather than causing confusion, the proposal would eliminate confusion by giving shareholders something they would otherwise lack – the simple chance to choose the best among all of the candidates, rather than between two slates of candidates. commented Professor Gilson. Pershing Square believes that the adoption by both Target and Pershing Square of a universal proxy card would reflect best-in-class corporate governance, and would result in the most qualified directors being elected, regardless of which proxy card a shareholder returned.

On the universal proxy card proposal, Bill Ackman of Pershing Square said, "it's important for shareholders to have a choice so that they can vote for whichever candidates they prefer, regardless of which proxy card they submit.

Pershing Square wants to provide shareholders with that freedom of choice. We are hoping Target will as well.

Because proxy cards have not yet been mailed, and because new proxy cards are easy to print from the company's or Pershing Square's website, Pershing Square does not believe that adopting a universal proxy card would add any material expense to the proxy contest. Pershing Square also noted that it would be willing to bear the additional printing costs of the universal proxy cards.

Furthermore, Target's public explanation for its refusal to use a universal proxy card does not address why Target would not permit its nominees to be named on Pershing Square's Gold proxy card. Indeed, based on the timing of Target's public response, Pershing Square questions how the matter could have been raised with its Board of Directors and whether Target's nominees were given the opportunity to consent to being named on a universal proxy card or Pershing Square's Gold proxy card.

Pershing Square requests Target's nominees for permission to be included on the Gold proxy card in the event that the company will not consent to a universal proxy card.
