ITEM 1. Description of Registrant's Securities to be Registered Holders of the Company's common stock are entitled to one vote per share on all matters submitted to a vote of our shareholders. Holders of the Company's common stock are not entitled to cumulate their votes for the election of directors.

Subject to the preferential rights of any class or series of preferred stock that may be issued by the Company in the future, holders of common stock are entitled to receive equally any dividends declared on the Company's common stock and, in the event of the Company's liquidation, dissolution or winding-up, are entitled to share equally in all of the Company's remaining assets. Holders of the Company's common stock have no preemptive rights or rights to convert common stock into any other securities and are not subject to future calls or assessments.

The Pennsylvania Business Corporation Law of 1988 expressly permits directors of a corporation to consider the interest of constituencies other than shareholders, such as employees, suppliers, customers, creditors, the communities in which the corporation operates and all other relevant factors, in discharging their fiduciary duties. Furthermore, the Pennsylvania Business Corporation Law of 1988 expressly provides that directors do not violate their fiduciary duty solely by relying on shareholders' rights plans or anti-takeover provisions under Pennsylvania law. In fact, the fiduciary duties of directors are not increased with respect to any act taken by them that relates to or affects a potential or proposed acquisition.

In addition, Subchapter F of Subchapter 25 of the Pennsylvania Business Corporation Law of 1988 is designed to regulate certain "business combinations" between Exchange Act companies and "interested shareholders." In general, Subchapter F prohibits the consummation of certain enumerated business combination transactions during a five year moratorium period unless either the stock purchase through which the interested shareholder became an interested shareholder receives the prior approval of a corporation's board of directors or such transaction receives the prior approval of a corporation's board or certain specified classes of shareholders, and in some instances the interested shareholder must comply with certain specified "fair price" valuation and payment requirements. The moratorium period runs from the date on which the interested shareholder becomes an "interested shareholder" (generally, the date the shareholder first acquires beneficial ownership of 20% or more of the corporation's voting shares). After the moratorium period, a corporation can undertake a business combination with the interested shareholder only upon shareholder approval as specified in Subchapter F and, in some cases, upon payment of a specified "fair price" to shareholders.

The effect of these provisions may be to deter hostile takeovers involving tender offers or other off-market acquisitions of shares that are made at prices above the prevailing market price of a company's shares. In addition, persons attempting to acquire control often make market purchases that increase the market price of a company's stock. These anti-takeover provisions may discourage any or all of such acquisitions, particularly those of less than all of our common stock, and may thereby prevent certain holders of the Company's common stock from the opportunity to sell their shares at a temporarily higher market price.

The Company's amended and restated by-laws provide that none of the Company's directors shall be personally liable to the Company or its shareholders to the maximum extent permitted by law. The effect of this provision is to limit the Company's ability and the ability of the Company's shareholders to recover monetary damages from a director for a breach of certain fiduciary duties (including breaches resulting from grossly negligent conduct). This provision does not, however, exonerate a director from liability (i) pursuant to any criminal statute or (ii) for the payment of taxes pursuant to federal, state or local law. The Company's amended and restated by-laws provide for indemnification of the Company's officers and directors to the maximum extent permitted by law, unless a court has determined that the act or failure to act constituted willful misconduct or recklessness.
