Understanding the recent Form S-4 filing

As required by federal law, Dominion Energy late Wednesday filed a Registration Statement (SEC Form S-4) with the Securities and Exchange Commission related to the proposed merger of Dominion Energy and SCANA. Here are some FAQ's to help you better understand what was filed and why:

What is the purpose of the S-4 filing?

The 241-page document provides detailed information regarding the merger agreement, including how and when the agreement came together. The filing also includes a preliminary proxy statement/prospectus, which incorporates important business and financial information about both Dominion and SCANA, and is the document that ultimately will be used to request that SCANA's shareholders vote to approve the merger agreement.

What happens next with the filing?

The SEC is expected to review the proxy statement. It is not unusual for the SEC to provide the companies with comments on the proxy statement, which means the companies would then have to make revisions to the proxy statement and re-submit it to the SEC. The preliminary proxy statement leaves the date of the shareholder meeting blank; a meeting date won't be set until closer to the time the proxy statement is finalized.

News reports said the filing contains information about "golden parachutes" for certain executives, including Kevin Marsh and Steve Byrne. What is that about?

The filing includes estimates of potential payments to key senior executive officers if the merger closes and if, within 24 months of closing, (1) the employment of a senior executive is terminated without "just cause", or (2) a senior executive terminates his or her employment for "good reason" as such terms are defined in the applicable compensation plans. Such compensation provisions are common in corporate change-in-control situations, such as a merger. They're designed to help ensure key executives don't allow their personal interests (e.g., keeping their jobs) to interfere with making decisions in the best interests of the company. To be clear, Kevin and Steve are not entitled to any severance payments related to the merger. The only compensation listed for Kevin and Steve is tied to previously awarded long-term equity benefits that have not yet paid out. These benefits typically pay out three years after they are awarded. Completion of the merger (if it closes) could simply accelerate the timing of the payout of this previously awarded compensation.

Other news reports suggest the filing shows that companies other than Dominion were interested in buying SCANA. Is that accurate?

To be clear, although we had conversations with other utilities that expressed some form of interest, those expressions of interest did not result in actual offers to buy SCANA. Dominion presented us with a customer-focused proposal, which was the only offer we received.
